BLINK for Decision Makers: Intuition in Decision Making – Part 2

This interactive presentation will explore the role of intuition, as opposed to deliberative reasoning, in decision making. Drawing on some of the cognitive and behavioural science around intuitive thinking and cognitive errors, and work done by academics in the US who have surveyed judges, the session will explore whether decision makers are vulnerable to intuitive thinking and associated errors.

How do we measure up? Professor Chapman will compare our own audience results with the results collected by the US scholars.
